National Licences Requirements

- Needs to work for the whole Switzerland
- Access should be granted immediately to authorized persons (no need to go to a library, to wait for a letter, ...)
- Authentication should be possible directly on publisher's platform (no proxy) using SAML/Shibboleth
- The process should be as automated as possible

Easy solution : Swiss IP addresses

- Rejected by the publishers

Swiss edu-ID

- Provides all Shibboleth mechanisms needed
- Provides verification of mobile phone number
- Will provide verification of postal address (September 2016)
- Provides a registration process open to everybody, with no delay

Swiss edu-ID

- Doesn't restrict registration to swiss residents
- Doesn't want to implement the National Licences specific logic

Requirement for publishers

- Support the SAML attribute eduPersonEntitlement and its value urn:mace:dir:entitlement:common-lib-terms

The Phantom Wahhabi: Liberalism and the Muslim fanatic in mid-Victorian India *

JULIA STEPHENS

Department of History, Harvard University Email: jasteph@fas.harvard.edu

Abstract

In the late 1860s and early 1870s the British colonial government in India suppressed an imagined Wahhabi conspiracy, which it portrayed as a profound threat to imperial security. The detention and trial of Amir and Hashmadad Khan—popularly known as the Great Wahhabi Case—was the most controversial of a series of public trials of suspected Wahhabis. The government justified extra-judicial arrests and detentions as being crucial to protect the empire from anti-colonial rebels inspired by fanatical religious beliefs. The government's case against the Khan brothers, however, was exceptionally weak. Their ongoing detention sparked a sustained public debate
